The Political Consequences of Religious Apathy

By Ken Connor

Our understanding of religion and its role in society has a direct impact on our politics. As the Founding Fathers laid the foundations for the unprecedented political experiment known as the United States of America, this relationship was foremost in their minds. The Judeo-Christian understanding of man as a fallen and sinful creature is reflected in James Madison's famous observation that "if men were angels, government wouldn't be necessary." The recognition of our innate dignity as creatures created in God's own image is reflected in the Declaration of Independence's assertion that all men are created equal and endowed with certain unalienable rights. America's political tradition rests squarely upon this conception of human nature: We are fallen, yet still bear the mark of our divine inheritance.

2010 Elections A Local or National Election?

In most elections, the outcome will boil down to local issues...even elections for national office. Whether it's fixing potholes, or the guy who can go to Washington and raid the national piggy bank and send back home more of what the voters sent there to begin with, as former Democrat House Speaker Tip O'Neal once said, "all politics is local". But not always.

As with everything in politics (and life), there are often exceptions. Sometimes, elections will revolve around national issues and themes. And 2010 is shaping up to be just such a year. People are growing more concerned about issues like terrorism, spending and the national debt than they are about goodies from the government. Opinions of Congress and congressman have dropped.

Gallup's new poll takes a look at voters' issue concerns and finds the following:

By 55% to 39%, more registered voters say a candidate's stand on national issues - rather than his or her ability to help people at the district level - is what matters more to them in voting for Congress. The percentage naming issues as the more important factor is the highest recorded on this measure in the nearly two-decade-long Gallup trend, although similar to that seen at points in the last two midterm election years.

Republicans are considerably more likely than Democrats to emphasize national issues in their assessments of candidates for the U.S. House of Representatives. Whereas a solid majority of Republican registered voters, 63%, say a candidate's positions on national issues are paramount to them, Democratic voters are evenly split at 46% in their emphasis on issues vs. district performance.

Notably, the majority of political independents share Republicans' greater concern for national issues.

This has Democrats worried, because, as the independents go, so goes the election. So why should this bother Democrats? First, because they're the "in" party. They run the place. Second, a "nationalized" election is usually a "change" election...meaning the "in" party will usually have problems. Third, the issues that the election is "nationalizing" around are issues that the GOP has a decided advantage on in public opinion.

Gallup concludes: In a year when voters rank the federal budget deficit as high as terrorism as a top concern, the implications are clear. Twenty years ago, candidates for Congress might have ingratiated themselves with voters by bulleting all of the federal spending projects they either had delivered to the district, or would support if elected. Today, such messages may be more likely to spark constituents' concerns about the effect the spending involved could have on the national debt.

Don't Just Vote for Change -Be the Change!

Sometimes changing a nation is as simple as acknowledging Who is in control. On a hot June day in Atlanta, a proud Marine dusted off a long-lost verse of The Star Spangled Banner to remind people of exactly that. Standing at the microphone of a Georgia Tea Party rally, Lewis Shaeffer patiently waited in line. When it was his turn, he hesitated for a second and then stunned the crowd by launching into a forgotten stanza of the national anthem. "Oh! thus be it ever, when freemen shall stand / Between their loved home and the war's desolation / Blest with victory and peace, may the heav'n rescued land / Praise the Power that hath made and preserved us a nation / Then conquer we must, when our cause it is just / And this be our motto: 'In God is our trust.'"

Lewis Shaeffer

When he finished, the crowd - many of them already on their feet - thundered its applause. But Lewis had already turned and walked away. "I hope nobody was offended," he said later. "I wasn't trying to be rude when I walked away from the mike. When a Marine executes his mission, he leaves."

And execute, he did. Video of the moment spread across the Internet like wildfire, racking up more than two million hits on YouTube and turning the former Marine into an overnight sensation. (<http://www.breitbart.tv/former-marine-stuns-crowd-at-georgia-tea-party-event>)

Lewis shrugs off the praise. "The nation seems bound on a collision course," he told one reporter. "I can't save the nation, but I can try to save some who have a willing ear and an open heart."

I can guarantee that there will be plenty of willing ears at this September's Values Voter Summit, as Lewis opens the event with his rendition of The Star Spangled Banner. He'll join Herman Cain, host of that June event where Lewis took a stand, and other confirmed speakers like Govs. Mike Huckabee and Mitt Romney, Reps. Mike Pence and Michele Bachmann, the Duggar Family, Dr. Bill Bennett, a special Tea Party leaders' panel, and other key conservative leaders.

Stem Cell Research

New Hope Restored Sight

The stem cell debate is transforming before our very eyes - or at least before several patients' eyes. With help from their own stem cells, several people have had their sight restored after chemical burns to their corneas left them blind. An Italian research team announced the breakthroughs in the New England Journal of Medicine, which includes the story of a patient who regained his ability to see after 50 years! Of the 112 people they treated, 77% had their sight completely restored and 13% had at least partial vision.

Dr. David Prentice's presented a slideshow, which was part of the talk he gave at the 2010 National Right to Life Convention, showing the latest progress of stem cell research. Each page works to clear up the common misconceptions about embryonic stem cells and cloning, the new science of induced pluripotent stem (iPS) cells that behave like embryonic stem cells yet without the use of embryos, eggs, or cloning, and the successful and ethical science of adult stem cells - including examples of patients treated with adult stem cells.

More Americans Believe Dems 'Too Liberal'

The number of Americans who describe the Democratic Party as being 'too liberal' has risen to the highest level since the 1994 elections, according to a recent Gallup Poll. The poll showed that 49 percent of Americans are more likely to describe Democrats as "too liberal." Only 38 percent said the party's views are 'about right.'

The Gallup report linked the increase to the rise in government spending that's taken place since President Barack Obama took office, specifically with regard to the administration's economic stimulus and healthcare legislation. Meanwhile, only about 40 percent of Americans said they believe Republicans are "too conservative." That's down three points from last year. Forty-one percent of respondents said Republicans are 'about right' on the issues - an increase of seven points from 2009.

In order to garner the most widespread voter support, political parties tend to try to avoid being perceived as too ideologically extreme.

The poll's results are based on phone interviews conducted May 24-25, 2010 with a random sample of 1,049 U.S. adults aged 18 and older. CBNNEWS.COM

The Consequences of Religious Apathy

By Ken Connor

In his treatise, The Christian Manifesto, published in 1981, Francis Schaeffer suggests that the gradual shift away from a Judeo-Christian worldview (or at least a Creationist) towards a materialistic view of reality has broad sociological and governmental implications for western society. His is an interesting thesis to ponder in light of a recent article in USA Today discussing religion and the Millennial Generation.

The article cites a recent survey conducted by Lifeway Christian Resources, which reveals that Millennials (defined as Americans born approximately between 1980 and 1995) are distancing themselves from traditional religious forms in favor of a personally-defined, nebulous kind of "spirituality." These individuals are less likely to pray, they don't read the Bible, and they don't go to church. Among the 65% who identify themselves as Christian, "many are either mushy Christians or Christians in name only... Most are just indifferent." Theological indifference may seem like no big deal in an age where moral relativism and the cult of the individual reign, but it's worth considering Schaeffer's argument that – whether we realize it or not – our understanding of religion and its role in society has a direct impact on our politics.

As the Founding Fathers laid the foundations for the unprecedented political experiment known as the United States of America, this relationship was foremost in their minds. The Judeo-Christian understanding of man as a fallen and sinful creature is reflected in James Madison's famous observation that "if men were angels, government wouldn't be necessary." The recognition of our innate dignity as creatures created in God's own image is reflected in the Declaration of Independence's assertion that all men are created equal and endowed with certain unalienable rights. America's political tradition rests squarely upon this conception of human nature: We are fallen, yet still bear the mark of our divine inheritance.

Our Constitution, consequently, addresses the human need for a robust rule of law while respecting the liberty and dignity of the individual. As Schaeffer rightly observed, a society's predominant worldview shapes its form/freedom balance: It shapes the form of government the citizens adopt and the freedoms they enjoy.

The problem is, fewer and fewer Americans recognize this fact, either because we are unwilling or unable to conceive of a reality in which we are not in ultimate control. If anything, we regard the move from religion to "spirituality" as one more step up the ladder of progress – a natural evolution from the silly superstitions of our ancestors to a more enlightened understanding of reality in which everyone is his own god. Ideas, however, have consequences, and the consequences of denying God may well prove detrimental to the future of the American experiment.

"Liberty cannot be established without morality, nor morality without faith."

Alexis de Tocqueville

When we decide as a society that God doesn't exist, all we are left with to account for what we are and why we exist is the idea that we are nothing more than an accident of nature. This denial of purpose and design in Creation goes hand in hand with a denial of absolute Truth and, subsequently, the embrace of moral relativism. Such a view of man and of the nature of truth is completely at odds with the Founders' views.

A view of man that denies our divine origins gives us little reason to respect our fellow men or to strive for virtue and justice in society. Furthermore, it threatens our human dignity and undercuts our claim to those "unalienable rights" we so cherish as Americans. As each of us withdraws deeper and deeper into our own individually-crafted bubbles of "spirituality," we are finding ourselves less and less able to reach even a basic societal consensus on questions of justice and morality. The result? We end up with a legal system that defends the due process rights of convicted felons and would-be terrorists while denying those same rights to the unborn, the disabled, and the elderly.

The one entity that does not object to a God-less society, however, is government – which may explain why the promotion of atheism has been central to some of the world's most brutal totalitarian regimes. A government seeking absolute authority over its citizens, after all, is not well served by competition with God. When we refuse to embrace both the blessings and the responsibilities of our divine inheritance, the power-hungry politicians and entrenched bureaucrats that manage the modern welfare state are more than happy to step in and do it for us – for a price that often comes in the form of higher taxes, less liberty, and less protection for the weak and vulnerable.

Online Poll of Conservatives Shows Strong Opposition to a 3rd Party

Christian Newswire- An Internet poll sponsored by Richard A. Viguerie, Chairman of ConservativeHQ.com, in conjunction with his recent article, "From an old-school conservative, advice for the tea party," showed overwhelming opposition to a conversion of the Tea Party movement into a political party.

The poll of 736 respondents showed only 11.8% thought the Tea Party should become a political party. President Obama is considered to be an extreme left wing radical by almost 92% of the poll respondents, with 46.5% labeling him a Marxist and 45.3% a socialist. Only 4.3% thought he was a liberal. More than 70% considered themselves part of the Tea Party movement, and an additional 17% were conservatives but did not identify with the Tea Party cause. Eight percent said they were libertarians and 4.5% opted for "none of the above."

Viguerie said the results were significant because it showed conservatives were not interested in splitting their votes. "Republicans lost three Senate seats in 2008 and two seats in 2006 because of conservative third-party candidates. If these five senators were still in office, there probably would have been no Stimulus Bill and no Obamacare. Conservative third parties almost certainly made these liberal legislative victories possible," he said.

In looking back on the Bush Administration and the Republican-controlled Congress, more than 77% said many conservative leaders got too close to the GOP and lost their independence and effectiveness. Only 13.5% disagreed.

Richard A. Viguerie pioneered political direct mail and has been called "one of the creators of the modern conservative movement" (The Nation magazine) and one of the "conservatives of the century" (Washington Times). He is author of "Conservatives Betrayed: How George W. Bush and Other Big Government Republicans Hijacked the Conservative Cause."

“America in the Latter Days”

Bruce W. Assaf

Bruce Assaf

The nation of Israel has been prophesied 811 times in Scripture. It is where the prophets Isaiah and Jeremiah uttered God’s moral and spiritual laws, setting the standard of righteousness for the nations of the world. Jerusalem is the City of the Great King and where God led Abraham to establish His covenant. The Lord said in His word, ‘I will bless those that bless thee, and curse those that curse thee’ (Genesis 12:3).

Israel had its rebirth on May 14, 1948, after being expelled from the land 2,000 years ago. It was the greatest prophetic miracle of our day. The rebirth of Israel and the returning Jews back into their homeland has seen Bible prophecies fulfilled and unfold before our very eyes. It was America under President Harry S. Truman that ‘solidified’ Israel by voting and standing with Israel as they declared their Declaration of Independence. As the Muslim Arab world rejected the plan to divide Palestine (the former land of Canaan in the Bible), UN Resolution 181 after World War II went in favor of Israel. America was God’s instrument through president Harry S. Truman, a man who was raised to know the scriptures and believed what God had declared in His word regarding Israel and prophecy. Since its rebirth, Israel and America have had a special alliance. America was founded on Judeo-Christian principles, we share the same values and have acknowledged the same God, the God of the Bible.

Our Christian faith and foundations began in the Old Testament. From the Book of Genesis to the Book of Deuteronomy, we find that those chapters come from the Jewish Torah. America at the turn of the 21st century and the involvement and protection of the Israel has brought untold blessings and protection to America as a nation (Genesis). Our alliance to Israel, with a tiny land surface of 8,000 sq. miles as opposed to 3 million sq. miles of hostile Muslim Arab neighbors, has given God’s favor on America according to His word. In 5 wars since its rebirth, it was America who armed Israel, who gained victory in every war against overwhelming odds of her survival. Scripture clearly teaches God’s hand is in her victories (Zechariah 12:6).

Israel is America’s greatest ally in the Middle East. It is an impediment to terrorism and holds back Muslim-Islamic dominance, not only in the Middle East, but also in America. Since the attack on America on September 11, 2001, Muslim radicals as well as moderate Muslims share the same ideology that eventually the law of Islam must ultimately prevail and the world must submit to Allah. So why the intensity over Jerusalem, and now America’s pro-Muslim stance under the Obama administration, especially after our shared values and both having common enemies?

As America’s Middle East policy shifts, our country is cooling off its relationship with her best friend and greatest ally and in turn warming up to an Islamic-friendly agenda. In his very first week in office, president Barak Obama sent out a strong message to the Muslim world that he acknowledged that America is no longer just a Christian nation. His first call to a foreign power was to Mahmoud Abbas, president of the Palestinian Authority. He told the Muslim world, on Arab National Television, that the United States of America demands a Palestinian State which would call for East Jerusalem to be divided.

Jerusalem is never mentioned in the Quran, and the true antiquity of the land dates back over 3,000 years ago to the Jews. We find in Scripture that God told Abraham the land was His, and it was in God’s sovereign will and purpose that the Jews are the rightful heirs of the land (Genesis 17:4,7-8 and Leviticus 25:23). And so, the intense conflict and war will in time affect every life on the planet.

Over 25 per cent of the Bible is devoted to prophecy and all Bible prophecy revolves around the nation of Israel. With Mr. Obama’s declaration to the Muslim world that the U.S. demands a Palestinian State, which would force Israel to give up and divide part of Jerusalem, the president of the United States is driving America into committing judgment-provoking sins against our nation. God’s Word clearly tells us that all those who would divide His land (Israel) would be judged (Joel 3:2).

With every Bible prophecy fulfilled thus far, and now with latter prophecies lining up t... it is clear to see what is unfolding in light of the perilous times we find ourselves living in.

Historically, nations that have turned on Israel have been judged by God. America is dangerously falling into the same fate other nations have incurred.

At this moment in time, Mr. Obama’s Middle East policies have made the world a much more dangerous place in light of his Islamic friendly agenda. As Franklin Graham recently commented, “Mr. Obama has given a free pass to Islam.” With America and her coolness to Israel, it is more than a political strategy, it is a shift in values, a turning aside of those Judeo-Christian foundations that America was built on. While Mr. Obama has his agenda, God’s agenda trumps all. “He who keeps Israel, will neither slumber nor sleep (Psalm 121:4). True followers of Christ are commanded to “pray for the peace of Jerusalem (Ps.122:6).

In conclusion, the nation of Israel continues to receive a growing number of daily threats to exterminate her. Iran continues to make progress towards the goal of obtaining nuclear weapons. Hezbollah and Hamas, radical Islamic Arabs, are stockpiling missiles that can hit every major Israel city—and we know from recent history they will not hesitate to use them. Mr. Ahmadinejad, Iran’s Islamic firebrand president, has stated repeatedly he can see a world “without America and Zionism (The Jews).

Unless America places her trust back in the Almighty and begins to understand His Covenant, and keep her special alliance with Israel we will see Ezekiel’s War (Ezekiel 38 & 39) sooner than expected followed by the mother of all wars...Armageddon.

Teen Abortion Rate Up

After 18-Year Decline

Fueled by a decrease in the number of school districts teaching abstinence as a part of sex education programs, the teen abortion rate rose in 2006 for the first time in nearly two decades.

Figures from the Guttmacher Institute, an arm of Planned Parenthood, show that 19.3 per 1,000 females ages 15-19 had an abortion in 2006. While the rise is slight, from 19.1 per 1,000 in 2005, it marks the first increase since 1988, when the teen abortion rate hit an all-time high of 43.5 per 1,000 females.

The 2005 rate had been the lowest teen ratio since 1972, the year before Roe v. Wade's Supreme Court decision legalized abortion throughout the country. In 2005, according to Guttmacher, 195,550 teens had abortions. That increased to 200,420 in 2006.

Jim Sedlack, founder of Stop Planned Parenthood International, says the teen abortion rate climbed in the 1970s and 1980s as moral-neutral sex education programs dominated public schools. The rate began to fall in the early 1990s as youths heard the abstinence message. Yet by 2006, several states had begun refusing federal government abstinence program funding.

"When you don't tell kids to remain abstinent, they have more sex and more of them get pregnant," Sedlack says. "The church cannot be quiet on issues such as abstinence," states Candy Tolbert, AG national Girls Ministries director. "But in addition to telling teens to abstain, we must let them know why abstinence is so important. There is no such thing as safe sex.

Casual sex and other forms of sexual intimacy change a girl emotionally, place her at greater risk for STDs and most importantly cause her to violate a moral code that she was likely taught at a young age. Her image, character and future are forever altered."

COMING TO A BALLOT NEAR YOU: WHEN DOES LIFE BEGIN?

On July 20th of this year, the voters in over forty-five Georgia counties, representing all thirteen Congressional Districts, will have an opportunity to answer the pressing question of when life begins. Appearing on the July 20th Primary ballot is the following poll, "Do you support an amendment to the Georgia state constitution so as to provide that the paramount right to life is vested in each human being from the earliest biological beginning until natural death?"

Using a little known election law, Georgia Right to Life (GRTL), asked local chapters to approach both Democrat and Republican Party County Chairman, with the request that they place a "Party question" on their respective ballots. Forty-five Republican Chairmen and one Democratic Chairman (Butts County) responded by requesting their local Election Board to certify the question for the July Primary.

Legally the outcome of the question bears no weight because it is a straw poll of local county voters on the issue of when life begins. Politically, it will serve as a barometer of local sentiment on the sanctity of life. Based upon Georgia House Resolution 5 (HR 5), sponsored last session by Rep. Martin Scott, the question is asked so that the pro-life strength of each county can be assessed, precinct by precinct.

Pro-Life Freedom Rides

Announced for This Summer

Christian Newswire- More than 100 people were in historic city's Kelly Ingram Park in April as Father Frank Pavone, national director of Priests for Life, and Dr. Alveda King, director of the organization's African-American Outreach, formally announced plans for Pro-Life Freedom Rides that will begin this summer.

"We are here to launch a movement within the greater pro-life movement, a movement of Freedom Rides for the Unborn," Father Pavone said during the morning press conference. "Like the Freedom Rides of five decades ago, these freedom rides symbolize the principle of the greater movement of which they are part, namely, that justice and equal protection of human rights belong to each and every human being, regardless of size or age or any other condition."

A host of civil rights and pro-life leaders from across the country stood shoulder-to-shoulder with Dr. King and Father Pavone to lend their support to the Freedom Rides, the first of which is scheduled for July 23-25. Riders will attend a concert and rally July 23 at the Birmingham-Jefferson Convention Center and then board the bus bound for Atlanta. Dozens of rides in all parts of the country could be scheduled over the next year, according to Father Pavone.

The 50th anniversary of the Freedom Rides of 1961 will be celebrated next year, which presented Priests for Life with the perfect opportunity to demonstrate that the fight against abortion is the civil rights battle of the 21st century. "Human rights begin when human lives begin and not one moment later," Father Pavone said.

The niece of slain civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Dr. Alveda King lived in Birmingham as a child and remembers the civil rights battles that scarred its streets and the souls of its residents. "When I lived in Birmingham, when our home was bombed in this very city, when my classmate was part of the group of four little girls killed in the bombing of historical Sixteenth Street Baptist Church across the way, I dreamed of a world when life would be better, when justice would prevail for all," she said.

With the Pro-Life Freedom Rides, she said, "We join our lives and hearts together with those who have gone before us. We take to the bus, to the streets of America, riding for justice and freedom for all, from conception until natural death."

The rides have been endorsed by African-American and pro-life leaders across the country. Catherine Davis of Georgia Right to Life noted, "In 1857, the Supreme Court, in the Dred Scott case, labeled blacks as property, denying them citizenship. The United States said no to this notion and restored personhood to blacks with the 14th Amendment. In 1973 the Supreme Court in the Roe v. Wade case again took personhood away from a class of people – the unborn. We are riding and calling on all Americans to again reject this notion by restoring the right to life to the unborn."

Reaching Bikers for Christ

You've seen them, and heard them on the highways and local roads. You've come upon them at intersections and traveling in packs, their engines pounding and racing in sync with your heart . . . while you hope to remain unnoticed. They are members of groups or gangs with comforting names such as Hell's Angels, Mongols, Outlaws and Pagans. Leather vests, tattoos, chain drive wallets and dark sunglasses often accompanied by some kind of facial hair and a not-so-friendly look in their eyes helps bring together the biker stereotype.

So, it would make perfect sense for a former NASA Space Shuttle analyst and part-time pleasure rider to go to the largest gatherings of bikers meeting at locations across the nation and point-blank ask them, "So, what are your dysfunctions?" Perhaps more impressive is the fact he's lived to tell about it.

Biker Chaplain Scott Bush, 48, has been ministering to bikers for nearly 20 years, the last five years as a nationally appointed AG U.S. missionary. Bush, his wife Sally and volunteers at biker events have been seeing God do incredible things in the lives of bikers. At massive biker events where hundreds of thousands gather, such as in Leesburg, Florida; Daytona Beach, Florida; Panama City, Florida; and Sturgis, South Dakota; Bush has seen incredible results. "Of those who we get to talk to, about 25 percent make a decision for Christ," he says. "At Sturgis last year, 422 made the decision to accept Jesus Christ into their lives; at Leesburg just a few weeks ago, 184 chose Christ."

How does Bush see such great results among a group of people who pride themselves in being hard core; come with nicknames such as Snake, Wolf, Picnic Table, Mad Dog, Big Red, Stump and Darth; and seem to thrive on intimidation? "Bikers are some of the most dysfunctional people you will ever meet," Bush explains, "and they're proud of it! At biker rallies, we set up a booth just like any other vendor and I have a motorcycle wheel called the 'Wheel of dysfunction.' We spin it and whatever dysfunction it lands on, that's the biker's dysfunction."

Now, although it's not advisable to tell just anyone that they're borderline psychotic, schizoid or narcissistic, with bikers (in a rally booth setting), it works. "They'll spin the wheel and land on one of these dysfunctions and their buddies will start laughing, and in less than two minutes we've built a relationship, a rapport with them," Bush says. "We then take them to the tent because everyone who spins, wins a prize, and we give them a salvation bracelet or key chain, we explain the steps to salvation and then God does the rest."

Bush says that he's found that bikers many times have a misconception about what it means to accept Christ as Savior. We're all on a spiritual journey that just begins when we accept Christ, he says. "When bikers find out how easy it is to accept Christ, many times they're like, 'Wow! I'll be glad to do that!'"

But Bush and his team don't just lead people to Christ and then abandon them. They give each one a Bible, a card that explains the plan of salvation and they follow-up with each biker by letter or e-mail checking in to see how they're doing and giving them a link to the AG Web site where they can find an AG church in their community to attend.

One might think that the reason Bush is in this line of ministry and is so effective is due to some kind of hard-line biker experience in his past, but that's not the case. Bush has a bachelor's degree in Behavioral Science, a masters in Mental Health and is currently working on a Ph.D. in Human Sexuality (family counseling). He says that in the early 90s, God just gave him a passion to reach bikers.

However, his Wheels of Faith Motor Ministries, which he also takes to car shows, is changing hundreds of lives month after month as well as planting spiritual seeds into the lives of many more.

Although some may raise their eyebrows at this, Bush says bikers are just regular people. He admits their culture is very different, but when the salvation message is presented to them in a setting based on rapport, they frequently respond.

Operation Kid-to-Kid™ Blankets a Hurting World with God's Love

Christian Newswire- Group Publishing, the premier publisher of children's Bible curricula, including Sunday school and VBS, believes that some of the best ministers to children who are experiencing disaster and hardship are other children.

This year's OK2K project is a simple no-sew fleece blanket that proclaims "God Loves Me!" right in the fabric. Each 56" by 42" blanket will also include a hidden surprise—a little white heart concealed between the fleece layers. The heart is a sweet secret kept by those who create the blankets, one that symbolizes God's love for the world and our love for others. Project participants are encouraged to pray specifically for the unknown person who will receive the blanket as they tuck the heart inside. Through Group's partnership with World Vision, blankets created this year will reach children in Africa coping with the pandemic's effects on their communities or families, including those who have been orphaned. Instructions for delivering the blankets to World Vision for distribution are included with each blanket kit.

OK2K has become one of the largest forces mobilizing children in serving other children around the world. But the ministry opportunities are not just for kids. Between recent natural disasters and the lingering effects of the global economic crisis, there are more opportunities than ever for Christians to show the love of Christ. Operation Kid-to-Kid can mobilize service projects any time of the year.

Children in need receive a fleece blanket and a coloring book

More Than 1 Million Invitations Anticipated for National 'Back To Church Sunday,' Set for Sept. 12

Christian Newswire- Following the huge turnout in churches across America last year for national "Back To Church Sunday," expectations are even higher for the 2010 event, set for Sept. 12. National "Back To Church Sunday" is a movement that seeks to reach the "un-churched" and "de-churched" - people who once attended church, but don't any more - and invite them to return for a special Sunday. Last year, hundreds of churches across the country participated, with members inviting more than 700,000 of their friends and family. According to a survey of participants by Outreach, Inc., a Southern California church marketing company, churches that took part saw a 19 percent average increase in their weekend attendance.

But inviting newcomers is only part of the campaign. The other part is getting the church ready for them to show up. Outreach has assembled several other tools to help churches prepare for visitors, which can be found at www.backtochurch.com

Effectual Prayer

Devote yourselves to prayer, being watchful and thankful. Colossians 4:2

Michael Youssef Seeks

100,000 Bible-believing Americans to Pray for Nation

Michael Youssef, Founder and President of Leading The Way, is asking for 100,000 Bible-believing Americans to join him in praying for our nation from July 4, 2010 to November 2, 2010. This urgent appeal comes as a result of a significant shift in the direction of the country.

“Growing up in a socialist dictatorship, I longed to come and live in America,” stated Michael Youssef, Ph.D. “I am so thankful to be here and to be called an American. However, I am concerned about decisions being made by today’s leaders and I know that Christians must seek Godly wisdom in this time.”

Together, we will be:

- Praising God for the privilege to live in America
- Thanking God for the rich Christian history of America
- Petitioning God for His blessing on America
- Praying to God for wisdom and discernment for elected officials
- Asking God for boldness and strength to share truth with friends and neighbors

“I thank God for all the activism that is taking place,” he added. “We need to act, and be involved; prayer is not an excuse for inaction. However, God promised to move on behalf of His children when they pray.”

Prayer is Key to Health, Study Says

Christian Newswire- Communicating with God can improve one’s physical health, Australian researchers suggest in a report showing that religious or spiritual prayer can boost emotional and physical wellbeing. “As a devout Catholic, I experience the power of prayer every day,” says David Beato, author of the new book The Power of Prayer, Endurance and Truth. “It helps me to conduct my personal and business lives in a less stressful and more positive way.”

Mr. Beato’s book describes how religion has shaped his life from his difficult childhood in Italy during World War II to his struggle to make it as a successful businessman in America. Along the way Mr. Beato faced many monumental tests of faith, including the death of his beloved son, professional setbacks and deceptive family members who tried to ruin him.

The Australian scientists believe that the psychological benefits of praying include stress reduction and promotion of a more positive and stronger outlook on life.

A number of medical studies show that prayer can help to:

- * Lower blood pressure.
- * Reduce anxiety and improve sleep,
- * Decrease depression,
- * Reduce cholesterol and atherosclerosis,
- * Promote faster recovery from surgeries.

“I believe the power of prayer will never go out of style,” says Mr. Beato. “In fact, for better emotional and physical health, people should definitely consider incorporating prayer into their everyday lives.”

NPC Releases Prayer Guide on Oil Disaster

The Assemblies of God National Prayer Center has created and posted a prayer guide targeting the Gulf of Mexico oil disaster.

The guide, which features eight prayer points, covers a variety of areas, including praying for the families of the workers killed in the initial explosion to the churches in the affected areas to praying that the environmental impact will be minimized.

“The ongoing contamination of the Gulf region by the oil spilling from the Deepwater Horizon well is a national disaster,” states NPC assistant director James Meredith. “There are thousands of people being affected right now and the situation is growing worse by the day we truly need for God to intervene.”

To download the free prayer guide, go to <http://prayer.ag.org> and look for the guide under “Alerts & Updates.”

If my people, who are called by my name, will humble themselves and pray and seek my face and turn from their wicked ways, then will I hear from heaven and will forgive their sin and will heal their land.

Billy Graham Library Unveils Kinkade Mural, Other Enhancements

Living Crusade reopened to the public April 21

After being closed for several months of renovations, the Billy Graham Library in Charlotte, N.C., reopens with a ceremony to showcase new additions and changes to the facility. Hosted by Franklin Graham, president and CEO of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association (BGEA), the event also highlighted other significant additions to the facility, which officially reopened to the public April 21, 2010.

The ceremony presented thousands of books from Mr. Graham's personal library and other artifacts, such as his desk and chair, a Bible he used for preparing sermons and one of his briefcases. Video presentations feature a welcome from Franklin Graham, a glimpse at the current ministry activities of BGEA-representing Billy Graham's ongoing legacy – and testimonies of those whose lives God has touched through the evangelist's ministry. "This Library is a ministry, and that's what we wanted. That's what we intended," said Franklin Graham. "These changes that we have made have strengthened the ministry. There is a clear presentation of the Gospel as you go through from room to room."

Kinkade, whose popular work is inspired by his strong Christian faith, created the mural specifically for the Billy Graham Library. The mural dominates the wall immediately following the finale theater, drawing visitors' attention to a hilltop cross, the focal point of an expansive landscape. "As I began working on it, one thing and one thing only kept being preeminent," said Kinkade before he unveiled the original oil painting from which the mural was made. "It was the cross. And that was so relevant to me as an individual because as I looked at that painting I kept saying, 'Well, that's what I need – the cross.' That's what all of us need. The cross. There's the hope. That's the only hope." Kinkade revealed that his own mother had decided to follow Jesus Christ at a Billy Graham Crusade.

The mural is not Kinkade's first gift to Billy Graham's ministry. In 1997 the artist presented Mr. Graham with the original framed canvas for his work, "Light of Peace," having been commissioned by the San Jose Billy Graham Crusade Committee to create a special painting for Mr. Graham.

The Billy Graham Library was originally dedicated in May 2007 at a ceremony attended by Mr. Graham and three former presidents, Jimmy Carter, Bill Clinton and George H. W. Bush.

The Billy Graham Library highlights Billy Graham's extraordinary life, a journey from the pastures and dirt roads of North Carolina to platforms and arenas in the world's greatest cities. With inspirational memories and state-of-the-art presentations, the Library offers something special for every age group. It serves as an ongoing Crusade and presents visitors with the same message that Billy Graham has delivered for more than six decades, the message of everlasting life through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.

The Billy Graham Library is open Monday-Saturday, 9:30 a.m.-5:00 p.m. and closed on Sundays. Admission is free. For general information call 704-401-3200.

About BGEA: The Billy Graham Evangelistic Association (BGEA) proclaims the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ throughout the world by every effective means available. From its headquarters in Charlotte, N.C., BGEA directs a wide range of domestic and international ministries. For more information, please visit www.billygraham.org.

Everyone Owns One. What's In It?

VeggieTales Legend Phil Vischer Opens the Bible

VeggieTales

VeggieTales legend Phil Vischer and WHAT'S IN THE BIBLE?, has a new 13-DVD series from Tyndale House Publishers. Led by puppet Buck Denver, WITB will stir laughter and love of the Bible for anyone with a sense of humor and a half hour, but it's aimed at children ages 5-11. From Chicago-based Jellyfish Labs, Vischer and team open the Bible, Genesis to Revelations, to new generations: how the Bible formed, its major themes and leading figures, even terms such as Vulgate, Septuagint, Canon, and Apocrypha.

"I picture the kid in the back of Sunday school class, with the questions teacher's dread. I know that honest answers now help solidify faith long-term," Vischer said. Select theologians comb every script to accurately present the Bible on ground common to the broadest number of believers. "We work hard to show respect all around," Vischer said.

VeggieTales has sold more than 50 million DVDs and produced two theatrical films around Bible stories. WITB plugs in the entire Bible. This comes in a groundswell of new concern for Bible literacy and because today's kids learn visually.

Episode one, "In the Beginning" Kids learn God's big story and how Genesis's first 11 chapters set up the whole Bible, and life. Episode two, "Let My People Go!" Kids will meet Abraham and learn how God used him to start a great nation called Israel. Episode three, "Wanderin' in the Desert" goes into Numbers, Leviticus, and Deuteronomy, joining Genesis and Exodus in the Law Books and setting up trials and victories of God's people.

"We must learn the language of our audience," said C.S. Lewis, who connected children to God. "For this generation, visual is fundamental to learning," Cambridge scientist Alister McGrath said. "By the time kids see the final DVD," Phil Vischer said, "they'll know the entire Bible."

Puzzled Pieces

by Maria Egilsson

“Usually at the end of each month I like to re-read the thoughts and prayers that I have penned in my journal. I make a note of scriptures that have steered me in correction or comfort. I don’t want to forget what God has said or to miss what He is doing. So I carry these things “forward”. I have found that God will build precept by precept, a little here and a little there. Like a puzzle that takes shape when you begin to lay more and more of the pieces down; you start to see how each part links and holds together. I find myself in no hurry to finish the puzzle. I take time to marvel over the picture that He has begun to reveal. I don’t want to rush through what God is doing. It is important to allow God to work deeply in our lives. Let Him put that piece in firmly and securely before moving on to other pieces. It’s like a secret that is slowly being uncovered. I savour those moments. Even when the pieces have been “warped” and in need of pressure to make them fit in the right place, I pause to thank Him. In the unfolding of the “bigger picture” I see how He is always with me.

Matthew 28:20 (Amplified Bible) .. behold, I am with you all the days (perpetually, uniformly, and on every occasion), to the [very] close and consummation of the age. Amen (so let it be).

Audio Bibles Have a Global Impact

Audio Bibles connect modern technology to the Word of God, with the timeless result of sharing God’s Word with people who hunger for spiritual knowledge. Faith Comes By Hearing has been at the forefront of this movement, working tirelessly to compile the largest catalog of Audio Bibles in the world with ongoing translations being worked on as we speak. Thanks to these efforts, listeners from around the world can now hear the Scriptures in pristine digital recordings in 460 languages. This technology allows us to have Audio Bible listening programs in 154 countries. Children and villagers who have not learned to read can follow along and begin learning written words. Audio Bible downloads provide global access to this collection of Bible translations, and make it possible to let the Word of God pour out to the people of every culture, in languages they can understand.

By taking advantage of the conveniences offered in today’s electronic world, the Bible MP3 and Bible on CD are shared using CD, DVD players, and computers and the Bible can now be carried out onto the missionary field using electronic playback devices with multiple power sources such as solar power. Through these methods, the Word of God is expanding into the farthest reaches of the world and being shared in audio format for the benefit of all.

Bible MP3 formats are available as Audio Bible downloads and Bible podcasts. The Bible online uses digital audio technology to compress music or sound files into much smaller files with little or no loss of sound quality. The entire Bible is transferred into a tiny digital file, and made available as a complete MP3 Bible download or as a Bible on CD. In addition to the Bible online, Faith Comes By Hearing offers other audio products and services. There are BibleSticks, which are MP3 players loaded with the entire New Testament. For kids, there is the children’s Bible version called the KIDZ BibleStick which has Old and New Testament stories, harmonized Gospels and children’s Bible songs. The technology offered from an online Bible allows listeners to hear God’s Word in a language that resonates best with them and is an effective tool for sharing the truth and power of God’s Word.

Prayer of Salvation

*“Dear Jesus, I believe in You. I believe You are the Son of God, that You died for my sins, and that You were buried and rose again as written in the Bible. I’m sorry for the things I’ve done that hurt You. Forgive me for all my sins. Come into my heart, take charge of my life and make me the way You want me to be.
